

Addiction, Alcoholism and Domestic Abuse

Although domestic abuse is not directly caused by alcohol abuse, it can certainly be fueled by intoxication. Someone who might otherwise be able to control their violent urges may be more likely to lash out violently when they are intoxicated. In addition to intimate partner violence or spousal abuse, an alcohol problem can lead to a number of crimes that cause pain and suffering to the families of the addicted person. An estimated 55% of people who commit domestic abuse were drinking.

Last updated on July 28, 2020.

Domestic Violence

Links

Addiction, Alcoholism and Domestic Abuse

Print

Table of Contents